

T.G. Edwards and company was the general contractor for a new business idea we constructed in Chattanooga, TN called Songbirds Guitars. Songbirds houses over 500 vintage instruments displayed in a chronological order to showcase how this instrument impacted American culture through the early 1900's thru the 1970's. The museum is located on the historic Chattanooga Choo Choo Complex. There were many things to take into consideration in this project. Preserving the historic features of a beautiful old building as well as finding "hard to get" materials to add to the aesthetics. Ty Edwards and team exceeded every expectation we had within this "never done before" concept. They worked closely with the architect and case designers to build a concept in an amazing way. Everything from subcontractors to last minute changes were handled with detail and patience. They worked closely with neighboring businesses and dealt with obstacles such as access points and streets being closed throughout the project. The communication was always forthright and clear throughout the process. There was never a call unanswered from Ty or his team. I highly recommend them for your next project whether it be a spec or custom built order. They have the resources and the will to get it done. The finished project is an example of their ability and we are proud they were the lead on this enormous project.

Sincerely,

Johnny Smith
